There is no “quick fix” to rebuilding the relationship between Chicago police officers and the communities they serve. On the contrary, progress will only result from residents and organizations working to make contributions that add up to a greater solution that helps unite the place we call home.

When we come together as a community to listen to and learn from each other, we have the power to impact both neighborhoods and lives.

That’s what On the Table is all about.

How can you start your conversation?

1. What is your assessment of the state of your community today? Where do you see need for positive change?

2. Think ahead one year. Five years. What do you see as the ideal relationship between law enforcement and the residents they serve in Chicago?

3. What concrete steps do we need to take now to achieve our desired outcome in the next year? The next five years?

4. Where do we see examples of this happening already in our communities, and what can we do to support or spread them?
